Survey Data: 2011 Releases

- Dynamics of Economic Well-Being: Poverty, 2004-2006. Analytical report on the duration of poverty spells out the frequency of transitions into and out of poverty based on the Survey of Income and Program Participation. It focuses on episodic and chronic poverty, length of poverty, exits from poverty and the characteristics of the affected population.
- Educational Attainment in the United States: 2010. Who is more likely to have earned a college degree – men or women? How many of us who begin work toward a degree actually earn one? Tables from the Current Population Survey present national data on the highest level of education achieved, making it possible to determine how close people came to graduating.
- School Enrollment in the United States: 2009. Statistics describing a wide variety of demographic and socioeconomic characteristics of students at all levels of school, from nursery to graduate. The data come from the Current Population Survey; historical tables are provided with annual statistics back in some cases as far as 1956.
- Fertility of American Women: 2010. Women with a college degree are experiencing a “delayer boom,” giving birth at a later age than other women but still having fewer children overall by the end of their childbearing years, the U.S. Census Bureau reported today. The finding comes from a comparison of the 2000 and 2010 Fertility Supplements to the Current Population Survey.
- Number, Timing, and Duration of Marriages and Divorces: 2009. Comprehensive data from the Survey of Income and Program Participation on the marital history of adults, covering topics such as the frequency of remarriage, duration of marriages, number of times ever married, median age at marriage and divorce and median time to remarriage following divorce.

Other: 2011 Releases

- May 9, 2011 -- Plato, Mo. Celebrates Recognition as the 2010 Census U.S. Center of Population ...
 - Townspeople, elected representatives, government officials and hundreds of students celebrated the naming of Plato, as the 2010 Census U.S. center of population. Amid music, speeches, banners and cheers, village chairman Bob Biram welcomed the crowd, saying, “We’re proud of our village. As one of our students said, ‘we’re in the middle of nowhere; now we are in the middle of everywhere.’”
